As spring meanders slowly towards us (yes, I know, officially it's almost over and into the next season, but are we there yet?), it's time to think about cleaning the barbeque, counting up the tent pegs and waxing down the surfboard. Or whatever equivalent activities pass for your authentic Kiwi summer. Every year at this time we pause to take stock of what was selected and championed by our customers over the preceding year. In other words, this is your rock-solid and road-tested buying guide for the festive season and beyond, as defined by your good selves when you voted with your wallets. Thus you'll find, within, our annual collection of Greatest Hits: 24 of the most popular buys for 2016. And let's face it, choosing a good wine can be tricky when there are so many of them in front of you, and you're perhaps feeling a little under-informed (mind you, our friendly staff are brilliant at sorting that out). It is generally a safe bet, though, that the wines that are rocking out the door are doing so for a reason.

What else? We revisit Central Otago icons, Rockburn and check out their very groovy magnums, dish up a dozen super spring sparklers, introduce the utterly delightful Isabelle Mathieu and Michel Jacob from the superb Grower champagne producer Serge Mathieu, peruse a selection of top rosés from New Zealand and France that'll launch you into summer, applaud as the crafty Tuatara bottles shed their skins, uncover the beautifully boutique Dutch gin producer, Rutte, feature some new releases from Craggy Range, Trinity Hill and Mud House and welcome the latest incarnation of France's first vinous cab off the rank, Beaujolais Nouveau. And that's not even all of it. Better get moving.

ROCKBURN

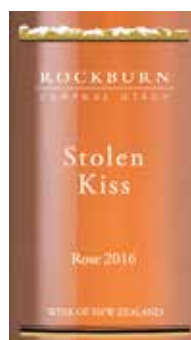

Central Otago's celebrated Rockburn winery began life rather modestly as surgeon Richard Bunton's 3-hectare hobby vineyard at Lake Hayes near Arrowtown, but as we know only too well around here, once the vinous obsession kicks in, 'hobby' just won't cut it. Thus the Rockburn juggernaut was launched, with an eventual expansion to a 9-hectare vineyard in the Gibbston Valley followed by the 33-hectare Packburn vineyard in the Cromwell Basin.

Pinot Noir is primarily where it's at; indeed Rockburn's Pinots have attained legendary status for their remarkably consistent brilliance. There is, however, room in the Central Otago climatic toybox for some very decent Chardonnays and aromatic wines, plus of course, the gobsmackingly good Stolen Kiss rosé, creator of its own legend and awfully hard to keep on the shelves (not that we're trying to do that of course).

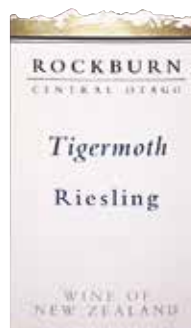

In the winemaking driver's seat is Malcom Rees-Francis, who has been at the helm now for around a decade. In tandem with his talented team, Malcom and his minimal winemaking approach continue to create impeccable wines that are exemplary expressions of the Central Otago terroir.

ROCKBURN MAGNUMS

With the party season looming and more glasses to fill, you could do a lot worse than one of these superb magnums: all three of these wines are showstoppers. Of course the Pinot Noirs, being top-shelf, will respond beautifully to more cellaring, especially being magnums, and what an excellent gift for someone special. But no need to hold back on that gorgeous rosé. Crack it open; big is good.

CHAMPAGNE

Serge Mathieu

ISABELLE MATHIEU AND MICHEL JACOB

Another of our distinguished grower champagne houses, Serge Mathieu is located two hours from Epernay in the Aube, rubbing neighbourly shoulders with the likes of Drappier and Moutard. This small family house do everything themselves, from viticulture to wine-making to marketing. The Mathieus have been growers in the Aube since at least 1760, seven generations selling their grapes to négociant houses and, plot by plot, accumulating an estate that now covers around 12 hectares. In 1970 Serge Mathieu took the family business to the next level, creating the first champagne bottled under the family name and producing an initial modest run of 5,000 bottles a year.

His daughter Isabelle and her husband, Michel Jacob, now run the business, but you'll still find Serge tinkering away in the cellars. Annual production is now at 110,000 bottles, with a concerted effort to extend the Serge Mathieu brand beyond French borders resulting in a large percentage being exported. The wines themselves are delightful, low filtration, low sulphur and gentle handling delivering beautifully balanced and approachable expressions that are predominantly Pinot Noir, that varietal responding favourably to the Aube's clay-rich soils. Malolactic is carried out with great delicacy, endowing these supremely elegant champagnes with a creamy richness.

The very charming Isabelle and Michel are making many changes, the most significant of them – a greater regard for environmentally sustainable practices – no longer a unique story in the Champagne region, with many of the current generation eschewing the ways of their immediate forbears, who were frequently operating with scant regard for soil, environment or the future. At Serge Mathieu, Michel is practising as close to a biodynamic programme as the region will sustain; the amount of moisture does mean they are very susceptible to mildew. Over the last 10 years, the couple have been planting more trees, and the birds and bees are returning.

SHEDS ITS SKIN

TUATARA CO-FOUNDER AND HEAD BREWER CARL VASTA

They do that you know, Sphenodon punctatus. Shed their skins at least once a year; and even that other beloved species, Craftus beerus, must adapt from time to time. Tuatara has a whole new style. It's a busy time for Carl Vasta and crew; after being crowned Champion Brewery at the Brewers Guild Awards for the second time, they're rolling out their new look with a few tweaks to some of their award-winning classics. Some new names, but never fear: your favourite beers may look and sound a little different, but they're still as delicious as ever. A select few brews have been updated to make them even better, so find some time to get reacquainted. We'll be flaunting the Tuatara's new skin all month with their core range, a few rare species and a tasting later in the month. So don't be surprised when you see a bottle of the Aotearoa Pale Ale labelled Kapai. We're sure you'll say just that.

RUTTE

SMALL-BATCH GIN BIG HISTORY

Holland's Rutte Distillery, one of the smallest distilleries in Europe, is famous for its boutique gins, genevers and liqueurs. It was established in the historic port city of Dordrecht in 1872 by Simon Rutte. Simon use to produce his own distillations, infused with exotic spices and fruits from the Dutch East Indies. His products became so popular that he converted the family café into a liquor store.

Not much has changed in 144 years; Rutte continue to produce small batches of premium handcrafted gins and genevers in the same backroom where Simon created the original spirits. They are committed to quality and tradition, their artisanal spirits 100% natural and free of any artificial flavourings, using fruits, botanicals and nuts sourced from only the finest producers. The recipes, handed down through seven Rutte generations, are closely guarded but have been refined and tailored for today's market.

A TASTE OF France

BEAUJOLAIS NOUVEAU

FIRST WINE OF THE HARVEST

While Beaujolais is, administratively, part of Burgundy, it is in fact distinctly different. The Beaujolais region, dominated by the red Gamay grape, produces one of the world's most individual and distinctive red wine styles. The wines are crafted by the carbonic maceration process, whereby whole grapes are fermented in an anaerobic carbon dioxide environment. The result is an intensely coloured, fresh, fruity, low-tannin wine intended for immediate consumption; voilà: Beaujolais Nouveau, the name created and largely popularised by Georges Duboeuf for the traditional vin de l'année wines. Beaujolais Nouveau is the region's calling card, but it has much more to offer, notably the ten 'Cru Beaujolais' wines. These are more full-bodied, significantly longer-lived wines that nonetheless retain the vitality that is the hallmark of Beaujolais. The man known as the King of Beaujolais, Georges Duboeuf, is the region's most important and well-known négociant, his wide selection of wines encapsulating its essence.

GEORGES DUBOEUF BEAUJOLAIS NOUVEAU 2016

At midnight on the third Thursday of November each year, the Beaujolais region bursts into life as every form of transport dashes through the countryside to deliver Beaujolais Nouveau, officially the very first wine of the French vintage, to cities across the world. There is no other wine quite like Nouveau, hot off the press and ready to enjoy.
