Keeping it Local

Here at Glengarry we're globalists by nature. How could we not be, given the vinous treasures that emerge so radiantly and so regularly from France, Italy, Spain, South America, Australia et al? However – telling you nothing that you don't already know – these are not your normal times. And so, while this is not an exclusive commitment (because after all, the whole world needs a bit of assistance at the moment), we're on a crusade to champion our local vinous heroes. Help them on their way to getting back on their feet.

There's no doubt that like so many other operations across our land, the New Zealand wine industry has taken a mighty hit. Our Slogan du Jour, then, is Buy Local, Support Local. The 'Buy Local' bit refers to the likes of Glengarry; we'd like to humbly request, or suggest, that you don't go spending all your hard-earned funds on online opportunists based in other countries, when right here in NZ we're all trying to keep our teams up and running and in full employment during these challenging times.

The 'Support Local' bit is about getting behind our Kiwi producers and purchasing some of their world-beating wines. We think they could use the support at the moment, and it's not so much of an imposition, really, given how good the local product actually is. We'd like to think that the likes of Zephyr, Brookfields, Matawhero, Loveblock, Jules Taylor, Rockburn, Lake Chalice, Nga Waka, Akarua, Allan Scott and all the rest of the talented field will be with us, plying their trade, for eons to come.

Lake Chalice

Uniquely Marlborough

Forged in 1989 on a stony paddock in the heart of the Wairau Valley, the pioneering Lake Chalice boast a dedicated following for their vinous output. Under the oversight of Head Winemaker Chloe Gabrielsen they draw upon Marlborough's singular regional diversity via their unique vineyard sites to produce several tiers of quality varietal wines. Mainstay of the portfolio is the black label Falcon series. The Nest wines offer classic Marlborough varieties at affordable prices, while The Raptor wines are made from selected small parcels of standout fruit. Lake Chalice are also longtime sponsors of the Wingspan Birds of Prey Trust, dedicated to preserving New Zealand's raptors. Neal and Judy Ibbotson, owners of Saint Clair, purchased the Lake Chalice brand in June 2016. Neal works closely with winemaker Chloe Gabrielsen and viticulturist Hamish Clark to create the best possible varietal Marlborough wines from Lake Chalice's Falcon, Eyrie and Talon Vineyards.

Matawhero

DRY-FARMING IN GISBORNE

Gisborne's healthy spring rainfall and long, dry summers mean Matawhero is ideally set up to practise dry farming. The deeply entrenched vines rely mainly on rainfall, encouraging the roots to search for water within their terroir, which in turn supports stronger and healthier crops and produces distinctive fruit-driven wines with good weight and intensity.

WAIHEKE'S NEW WAVE OF WINERIES

Waiheke has a wine revolution of sorts going on and it's one to be watched. Earlier this year we hosted one of our Bordeaux suppliers and took them to Waiheke, visiting both of these producers. We think the Bordelais may have left a little nervous. The Batch winery is known to many as having a great restaurant; look a little further and you'll also find exquisite small batch wines made by Daniel Struckman. He's been hiding his talents, but no more; Dan is one of the most exciting up-and-coming winemakers in New Zealand. The well-established Sam Harrop MW makes his wine at Dan's place. Sam's a Kiwi writer, wine educator, orator, yeast expert and wine fanatic who loves to share his craft. All of these wines are worth hunting out.

Devilishly Good

IN THE REALM OF BACCHANALIAN DELIGHTS

The Devil's Staircase is the Rockburn Winery's other label, the one for everyday drinking (with the possible exception of Sundays, given the moniker). The unrelenting environment tortures the vines until their twisted limbs produce a wine worthy of absolution. These wines are sinfully succulent and devilishly good (who writes this stuff?). Go on. Do it.

Dave Roper

Villa Maria's Musical Wine Wizard

IHUMATAO SV CHARDONNAY 2018

A complex array of peach and grapefruit aromas, a hint of cashew. A textured and layered palate reveals mealy notes and lovely linear acidity with a long elegant finish.

CELLAR SELECTION PINOT GRIS 2019

The fruit shines in a spicy apple and pear fashion. There is a baked bread character, with plenty of mid-palate richness and a finish that is long and voluptuous.

CELLAR SELECTION MERLOT CABERNET 2018

The palate is soft yet concentrated, beautifully focused with fine-grained tannins. Approachable in its youth, the wine has an understated finesse and beauty.

CELLAR SELECTION SYRAH 2018

Vivid blueberry, plum and peppery Indian-spice aromas and a juicy and supple texture, finishing with rich, silky tannins and generous length. NZ Wine of the Year Awards 2019: Champion New Zealand Wine; Champion Syrah; Best Hawkes Bay Wine; Gold Medal.

The wine industry is full of colourful people; all too often their story is told solely through the wine they make. Dave Roper is that man, a talented winemaker, patient, mad about music. Which is often enjoyed alongside another passion, exceptional food. Raised in the Bay of Plenty by two science teachers, Dave completed a degree in microbiology at Auckland University before studying winemaking at EIT in Hawkes Bay and sashaying seamlessly into vinous employment. Starting at Villa Maria in 2002, he was promoted to Auckland winemaker in 2007 before becoming Villa Maria's Senior Auckland winemaker in 2015.

The wine unique to Dave and his local vines is the superb Ihumatao Chardonnay, sourced from the 10 hectares surrounding Villa Maria's Montgomerie Road winery in Mangere. Chardonnay does exceptionally well here, the style produced elegant and age-worthy. A number of other white varieties are also grown in tiny quantities, their production mainly for the cellar door. A large number of Villa Maria's wines are finished and bottled in Auckland. This gives Dave a unique perspective, overseeing the final processes for much of the company's portfolio.

Dave satisfies his musical yearnings by regularly jamming with mates, the other major obsession his treasured vinyl collection. And of course, with all that live music going down on a regular basis at Villa Maria, i.e. Dave's back yard, he's living the life, isn't he? Front row! We've made Dave our musical guru for the month and asked him to prepare a soundtrack, which you can download at home. A bottle of Dave's Chardonnay (well, if we're being nit-picky, it's Villa Maria's) and a home-cooked meal to a backdrop of the winemaker's carefully selected playlist? You'd be mad not to.

a trip to Central O

The Glengarry Team Heads South in Search of a Perfect Central Otago Moment

In late January, Glengarry GM Liz Wheadon, Glengarry Victoria Park Site Manager Zane Winskill, Fine Wine Consultant Regan McCaffery and Product and Marketing Assistant Anthony Sorensen headed to Central Otago for three days of Pinot Noir immersion. Now in its 14th year, the annual Central Otago Pinot Noir Celebration is an event we have regularly attended, looking on as this impressive region has expanded and evolved into the global Pinot powerhouse it is today.

On Day One, the team arrived in Queenstown in time for an 11:00am start, initially boarding a bus headed for the shores of Lake Wanaka and Rippon Winery. Taking the long way round with winemaker and local history legend Matt Dicey on the microphone, the bus was treated to a visual update of the region, featuring ownership changes, new plantings and all the comings-and-goings. Once at Rippon, the event kicked off with a posse of poets and explored a sense of place and belonging. This was followed up with a series of sub-regional tastings, highlighting the strong focus on place via an in-depth exploration of the sub-regions of Central Otago. Day One concluded with a trip to the Cardrona Hotel to taste a collection of white wines from the region and sample local fare. Then back over the Crown Range to an early night for most. Sadly, one of the buses did not quite make the Crown Range turns with ample application and became stuck. Our intrepid four were not on that bus.

Day Two started with a formal tasting, conducted up the gondola at Skyline. This gave the team the opportunity to try wines from forty of Central Otago's producers, with the focus of the tasting Pinot Noir and its current vintage. There was as well an opportunity to explore aged wines. As they headed to the tasting, Liz challenged her group to each assemble a list of their top 12 wines, post-tasting. It was the collation of the resulting four lists – which in fact displayed a remarkable similarity – that generated the selection of Central Otago Pinot Noir wines gracing these pages.

From there everyone was treated to lunch at Peregrine with the talented New Zealand chef, Michelle Fisco. Michelle's focus is on foraging and indigenous ingredients. One such item served was kamo kamo, a native squash that took Liz back to days up north when her mother cooked it. The evening saw the team crossing Lake Wakatipu on the TSS Earnslaw to Walter Peak High Station, an unforgettable experience.

Day Three of the Pinot Noir immersion took the four through to Bannockburn, first stop Carrick Winery and a rosé tasting. How things have changed; in the Pinot Noir Celebration's early years, rosé was frowned upon and white wine was served behind closed doors. These days, the region has matured its vision, growing more diverse and exciting by the year. Participants were then divided into groups. While locomotive transport was provided for some in the wider group, for the Gang of Four it was electric bikes.

Sadly for Zane and Anthony, their bikes lost power and they actually had to cycle. The four took their bikes up and down Bannockburn (some pedalling, some not) and talked wine, the region and viticulture. The final part of the event was lunch under marquee at Mount Edward's estate in Bannockburn. It was a BYO affair where the participants shared wines from around the world, discussing and benchmarking the planet's great wines.

Central Otago is a region full of generous souls, proud of what they do and eager to share it. Every time Glengarry goes there, we are welcomed with open arms. In the early events, we'd have been comfortable with a selection of the wines on our shelves. In 2020, all of the wines the team tasted were at a level that we'd gladly have any and all of them instore. What also rung home more than ever is the differing values that the various sub-regions contribute to the Central Otago legend, and how the winemakers, letting the vineyards speak for themselves, are doing all they can to enhance that aspect and not mute it. Check out the collection of wines our team have selected; it's an impressive range.

Founded by Chile's Guilisasti family, the inspirational Emiliana Organic Vineyards are located in Chile's Casablanca Valley, and own vineyards in some of Chile's best wine-making areas. Their organic and biodynamic way of winemaking started out as a trial. When they saw the resulting difference in their wines, not to mention in their people, they started moving more and more vineyards over. For the team at Emiliana, this is a comprehensive, interlocking system that involves the creation of balanced vineyard ecosystems within which a host of animals, birds, insects and plants play a part in the maintenance of vineyard balance, acting as natural pesticides, weed killers and compost producers. 100% of the organic waste produced is used in the production of compost, which is then reused as fertilizer in the fields. Boxes are made from recycled materials and the corks come from certified sustainable companies.

Emiliana's approach to their staff is equally inspirational. The workers are guaranteed a fair wage and offered technical scholarships to provide them with professional development opportunities. They are taught how to handle organic gardens and provided with land to grow their own organically-cultivated fruit and vegetables for family consumption. They are provided with the necessary training and tools to create their own future micro-enterprises producing honey, olive oil, wool and hats, and Emiliana provides land to the workers to apply for government housing programs and improve family housing conditions. The wines themselves are very accomplished: expressive, fragrant, clean and cooler in style, owing to the proximity of the sea.

Spain

the armada is here

If you've not yet stepped aboard the Spanish bandwagon, there's no time like the present; you'll quickly see what you've been missing. No other country has turned its wine industry around in such dramatic fashion, via a combination of opportunity, technological advances and a fearless new generation of winemakers. Theirs are exotic, heady, muscular, succulent and sexy wines that have converted a generation as the world discovers the exciting new flavours and outstanding value of the offerings from one of the oldest vine cultures in Europe.

The somewhat lyrical Dominio de Tares say their wines are of 'great equilibrium' and 'cradled in noble woods.' Responsible for putting the once moribund region of Bierzo back on the map, they're just over a decade old, an infant in Spanish wine terms. However, they utilise ancient vineyards and painstakingly artisan-like practices to create expressions as pure and characterful as can be coaxing from the multiple microclimates in which they operate. With their fierce focus on improving vintage by vintage and harnessing of some of the best oenological minds in Spain, they are a winery to watch.

French Rosé!

Côtes de Provence's New Arrival: Saint Max

When it comes to rosé, Provence's Château Riotor has long been a favourite of ours, and many of you have been in agreement. However, in a rapidly evolving situation, Riotor has now been sold to another estate that will be using the grapes for their own brand.

The news is not all bad! In fact some of it is very good: Our original Riotor connection has created a brand new Côtes de Provence rosé label, and you're looking at it. Saint Max is named in recognition of the first bishop of Aix-en-Provence, Saint Maximin, who came ashore on the Côte d'Azur in the first century AD to evangelize Provence. Or perhaps to drink rosé; who knows with those old-time bishops?

However, that's just the preamble. What's important to know for you Riotor fans is that the Saint Max style closely resembles that of Riotor's; that is to say it is pale in hue with a beautiful aromatic intensity and a vibrant and reasonably weighty palate. If you like it, and we think you will, the Saint Max will, going forward, also be available in 1.5-litre magnums and 3-litre jeroboams. Nice.

Highland Queen

Established in 1893 and founded by Roderick Macdonald, Macdonald & Muir Ltd spent 10 years developing blended whisky before releasing Highland Queen. They acquired a substantial share of the Glenmorangie distillery, which became the base for their flagship blended scotch. Towards the end of the 20th century the brand changed ownership and found a home at the Tullibardine distillery in the Scottish Highlands. In recent times they have expanded their range, with different aged blends demonstrating the influence of time on the maturation process. The premium blended whiskies are smaller releases marrying the perfect blend of some of Highland Queen's best barrels, while the single malt range demonstrates the purest expression of Highland Queen, the backbone to all of their blends.

The name Highland Queen references the legendary return in 1561 of Mary Stuart, aka Mary Queen of Scots, to the Port of Leith, the original production site of Highland Queen Whisky. Mary was married at a young age to the French Dauphin, who died prematurely. Upon returning to Scotland she married her cousin, an arrangement that didn't last long after she was accused of having an affair, with her alleged muse subsequently executed. Later on she was convicted of treason by her own sister. Whatever side of history you side with, we can all agree the Highland Queen herself probably could have used a few stiff drinks.

Today the Highland Queen whisky's noble values, sense of history and independent spirit permeates throughout everything they do. Master distillers and blenders with a deep understanding of tradition, they are well worth having in your cabinet | TM

Schloss

Germany's Barons of Small-Batch

Near the city of Mainz in Germany, the Bischofsberg mountain has a winemaking pedigree going back to the Dark Ages. This tradition became firmly entrenched in 1100, when Benedictine monks identified the site as being superb for vine growing and built a monastery on the mountain. This abbey was dedicated to John the Baptist, which in turn led to the hill on which it stood becoming known as Johannesberg (John's Mountain). The monastery stood for nearly four hundred years before being destroyed in the German Peasants' War of 1525. A baroque palace was later built here in 1716, before changing hands several times due to economic and Napoleonic upheaval. Vineyards of Riesling were planted around in 1720 – making it the oldest such vineyard in the world. The palace was partially destroyed in the bombing of Mainz in 1942, then subsequently rebuilt, and has stood there since under the name of Schloss Johannesberg.

All of this to say, of course, that Schloss Johannesberg is a site very long in history and winemaking tradition. In the bowels of the castle another treasure was recently unearthed – the 1805 records of cellar master Odo Staab. These included a recipe for juniper water and bitter orange liqueur, which have been used as the inspiration for a new artisanal gin.

The 35 hectares of vineyard stand around the castle still, and produce some of the world's greatest Riesling in a range of styles. Not all that grows on the grounds of Schloss Johannesberg are grapes however, with the south facing slopes looking out over the Rhine also home to a diverse garden.

It's from this garden that the dried peels of bitter oranges are sourced, and it is from these that the defining character of the Schloss Gin is distilled. Together with hints of lavender, lemongrass and juniper the gin is as rich in flavour as it is in history, savoury but deliciously fresh. The Schloss is only made in small batches, making us very lucky to be able to have it here in New Zealand! | DL

You may be labouring under the impression that Tosti are producers of good prosecco and asti at bargain prices. And you'd be right. However, there's a whole lot more going on. Aperitivos, for instance. Tosti is based in Canelli, in the heart of the DOCG-classified area for the Moscato Bianco grape, officially recognised as a world heritage site by UNESCO.

The Tosti company has been run by the Bosca family for seven generations. They have been producing still and sparkling wines since 1820 and undertaking grape harvests for almost 200 years. Their heritage consists of a serious winemaking tradition and culture, along with a wealth of experience and a deep understanding of their Canelli terrain. Giovanni Bosca and Mariacristina Castelletta are the seventh generation at the helm.

One of the most precious elements of the Tosti heritage are the 500 families of suppliers who passionately cultivate 650 hectares of vineyards, averaging just over one hectare of land per family of hand-harvested grapes.

In the early 1800s the Bosca family began liaising with the local herbalist. They worked from an ancient recipe that involved Moscato wine flavoured with more than 30 different herbs and spices, arriving at a unique and special elixir that was handed down from generation to generation. The Vermouths di Torino are sophisticated, ethereal, aromatised wines that can be imbibed on the rocks or to add an elegant touch to any cocktail.

The Cardamaro is the only Italian amaro based on wine and Nizza Monferrato Cardoon, a key ingredient in traditional Piedmontese cuisine. It offers a delicious balance between the sweet note and the bitter quality of some of the herbs. Beautifully complex, with a lingering spicy finish.

Little Creatures

As craft beer started to take off in the late 1990s-early 2000s, a group of beer lovers joined forces to brew their ideal American Pale Ale. Setting up in a former crocodile farm, the facility of a huge shed on the water's edge in Fremantle was the birthplace of Little Creatures Brewing. They first opened their doors in late 2000.

Their flagship beer, the Little Creatures Pale Ale, is carefully honed to perfection. Brewed longer than average, the slow, gentle process of brewing, fermenting, bottling and conditioning lasts nearly six weeks. The beer uses the best whole cone Cascade and Chinook hops available from the United States. Preservative and additive free, the Pale Ale is bottle-conditioned for additional freshness and character, the bitter finish bringing you back for more.

In 2005 Little Creatures had gained enough momentum to expand nationally. In 2008 they opened the Little Creatures Dining Hall in Fitzroy, Melbourne. A long way from home on the east coast of Australia, the venue showcased what the company was doing and quickly converted the hearts, minds and taste buds of Melbournites. The Fitzroy Dining Hall was the epicentre of Little Creatures in eastern Australia until early 2016, when they turned their focus to a new brewery in Geelong.

The problem with growth for a brewery over such long distances is maintaining quality and consistency. This is why Little Creatures decided to create a second brewery 3,400 kilometres east in Geelong, Melbourne. Formerly a 1920s wool mill, the Geelong site was established in 2011, but officially opened a couple of years later. The original recipe, ingredients, processes and dedication to quality remained exactly the same. Not only is the beer the same, it's just as fresh. Now distributing internationally, Little Creatures has become a New Zealand favourite. | TM

Belgian beers

Belgium is best known for its chocolate, waffles, Renaissance architecture, monasteries and, of course, beer. It can be difficult to make generalizations about Belgian beer, because one of the defining characteristics of Belgian brewers, besides their immense creativity, is their general scorn for the concept of style. The brewer is often thinking of creating a revolutionary drinking experience; they have a particular and harmoniously balanced taste, an idea of texture, and certain aromas in mind that they'd like to achieve in their brew, and that is exactly what their end product will undeniably show.

You can enjoy Belgian beers that explode with fruit flavours, experience others that are earthy with savoury and mushroom umami characters, and sometimes you may find yourself sampling a fruity sourness, ranging from a light tartness to a mouth-puckering hit of acidity. There can be nuances of flowery rose-like aromatics from the hops, or even hints of cardamom or chamomile.

Hoegaarden White is a pale-coloured beer with a fresh, crisp flavour and captivating aroma. The refreshing citrus and earthy coriander alleviate the stresses of modern living and whisk you to another place entirely.

La Trappe Dubbel, an authentic Trappist beer that must follow very strict monasteristic criteria before it can be branded as such, is a classic dark brown ale offering fruity notes of vanilla and roasted chocolate, with malt, dates, honey and a subtle influence of dried fruit on the palate.

La Trappe Quadrupel is amber in colour with heightened aromatics of clove, nuts and banana, showcasing intense warm notes of caramel and dates on the palate. Leffe Blond is richly nuanced with aromas of malt and spice. It has an agreeably rich taste that is balanced by being gently bitter with hops, and malt. | KA

DAB

Dortmunder Ambassadors

Dortmunder Actien-Brauerei more simply known as DAB has famously been known for the last 150 years as being the prime ambassador of the Dortmunder beer style; a style brewed by the Dortmunder Union in Dortmund, Germany which exhibits pale, soft-textured lagers that take an influence from the Pilsner style that is brewed in Pilsen.

DAB have brewed their thirst quenching beers complying with the Reinheitsgebot, the German Purity Law of 1516. Using only pure and natural ingredients, DAB's beers only consist of hops, barley, water and yeast in every Stein, all while following their original recipes that date back to 1868. The quality we see here is exceptional, and our thirst defeated.

DAB Dortmunder Export follows on from the introduction of bottom fermentation; a fermentation method that marks a milestone in the brewing industry. Dortmunder Export brewed in this way allows us to enjoy a freshly crisp, blond lager with a mildly hoppy flavour profile that is supported with gentle malts. This is a very pleasing, harmoniously balanced beer with a well-rounded profile, and soft texture.

DAB Maibock; a 'Bockbier', a style with an exceptionally old history that originated in Northern Germany in 1351, and quenched the thirst of many a monk whilst they fasted, and was seen brewed traditionally for the 40 days of Lent. However today this style of beer can be enjoyed all year round. This deceptively high strength golden coloured beer showcases a refreshing, accentuated bitter hoppiness balanced out with a cherry sweetness, and full bodied malt characters all while being exceptionally palatable.

Whether it is winding down after a full day of back breaking work, or chilling out with a cold one accompanied with pizza, mates, and Netflix, DAB has your thirst needs covered.
