Going Gallic

We go on a virtual adventure in France

Ah, France. Wonder how they're doing. It might not be quite the time to hop on a plane and go off in that particular direction (or any direction!), but in our shamelessly wine-loving hearts, we're right there. Where they make the good stuff. Of course, so do we, but the French, they have that je ne sais quoi don't they? With their champagne, and their burgundies, and their bordeaux, and their aromatics, their rosés and their cognac, and their Sauvignon Blanc. Anyway, the point is, the French have set the pace for so long that whenever anyone is making anything, they invariably look over their shoulder to see how it measures up. Benchmark is the word we're looking for. Even if it's just to say, 'we'll do it differently,' there's no denying who it is we're trying to do it differently from.

So, currently prevented from going there in the flesh, we're taking a trip in that most sleekly gorgeous of vehicles, our minds, with a bit of assistance along the way from some photographs and a healthy dollop of expertise accumulated over the last 75 years as wine retailers and all-round aficionados. Come with us.

In our rush to go Gallic, we haven't forgotten the vinous gems in our own backyard. We have one foot firmly in Martinborough, Marlborough, Central Otago, Gisborne and Hawkes Bay, and we even stretch out over the ditch to our Australian compadres, because they, too, know how to make a good vino. And since these days we're all-encompassing, we delve into New Zealand's very own whisky wizards, Thomson, and Scotland's Benriach distillery, some excellent Kiwi craft beers and, what do you know? Non-alcoholic spirits! They're cool. Check them out.

Stay warm.

Mud House

Mud House was established in 1996, and proves that big can be beautiful and comes with benefits; in this case, exceptional value. And that although a company of good size, 'sustainable' not only matters, but can be embraced. Owned since 2014 by Accolade Wines, Mud House wines have great international distribution enabled through this ownership.

The Mud House vineyards are situated in three of New Zealand's wine regions, Central Otago, Waipara and Marlborough. In each region they have single vineyards that produce their premium wines, expressions that over-deliver for the price point.

In Bendigo, Central Otago, is their Claim 431 vineyard, a smart Pinot Noir site planted in 2003. In Waipara, Mud House have The Mound vineyard, planted in 2002, predominantly in Riesling grapes (hot tip: Mud House have a seriously large holding of Riesling, so the fruit in their $11.99 Riesling demands a price tag far in excess of what they're asking; and right now, they need to sell a lot of Riesling).

Lastly, in Marlborough, the Mud House home and cellar door is at the Woolshed Vineyard in the Wairau Valley. Here, Sauvignon Blanc is dominant. The winemaking team is headed up by guitarist, camper, home brewer and general all-rounder, Cleighen Cornelius.

43750 LA 50/50 2018
$27.99 CASE OF 12 $26.99 A BOTTLE

Burgundians Anne Gros and Jean-Paul Tollot thrive in France's south, responding avidly to the differing climate there. Old Grenache, Syrah and Carignan vines create a vibrant refreshing, fruit-driven table wine.

Shiraz vs Syrah

As a variety, Syrah and Shiraz are one and the same: a thick-skinned grape producing wines with bold colour, their tannins rich with moderate acidity. Australian wines generally reference Shiraz on the label, which gives us an idea of what style we can expect. While we often think of Australian Shiraz as being bold and concentrated, fruit forward and, perhaps, jammy, more than ever, such generalisations can prove tricky. The Barossa Valley's warm climate produces lush, textural wines full of chocolate, black fruit and spicy characters; Coonawarra's warm, red soils bestow a peppery touch; MacLaren Vale's proximity to the sea adds a more open, breezy note to the wines, with Clare Valley providing that distinctive minty touch. All these styles are represented in the selection below.

The same variety grown in New Zealand takes the name Syrah. In doing so, it gives a nod to the cool climate Syrah produced in the northern parts of the Rhône valley. There, you characteristically get savoury and leather notes with a marked black pepper influence. There's often a burnt-rubber note consistent with this variety when grown in a cool climate. Silky tannins are typical as well. All of these characters are the very same ones you'll find in New Zealand Syrah, hence our adoption of the name. The lifted aromatic nature and vibrant colour is often due to a touch of Viognier in the blend. While Syrah makes up a very small percentage of plantings in New Zealand, everyone is talking about it, not least the producers in the Rhône Valley.

Nga Waka

consistently consummate

One of the defining characteristics of Nga Waka, a pioneering Martinborough winery, is consistency. Consistency in approach, in winemaking, and consistency in their wines, for 26 vintages. The story of their people shares the same characteristics – Roger Parkinson has made every wine since their first vintage in 1993 and Vineyard Manager, Mike Kershaw, has tended the vines since 1996. A change of ownership in 2015 to Jay Short and his wife Peggy Dupey has seen a slow but steady stream of positive developments at the winery. "I don't think there is another winery in Martinborough that has had the same winemaker for 26 vintages," says Jay. "Roger's technical skill as a winemaker and his local knowledge is reflected in the high quality of the wines he produces." Jay and Peggy initially worked with Roger on improving Nga Waka's vineyards, expanding their holdings from 10 hectares to over 20. The new vineyards have been renamed the Pirinoa Block and the Mike Kershaw Block, in recognition of Mike's 23-year commitment to Nga Waka. Plans to build a cellar door are also underway, and former Glengarry stalwart, Mick Hodson, has been appointed GM. Nice move, Nga Waka.

A tour of France

We take a trip to the birthplace of some of the world's great wine styles

France embodies the essence of winemaking, not to mention the enjoyment of the product itself, and many of the world's finest vinous practitioners take their inspiration from the holy grails of Burgundian Pinot Noir and Chardonnay, the legendary reds and the sweet wines of Bordeaux, the aromatic wonders of Alsace, the spicy opulence and deft balance of the Rhône Valley's blended wines, the delicious delicacy of Chablisian Chardonnay, the smoky, mineral elegance of the Loire Valley Sauvignons, or the deceptively pale yet dazzlingly weighted Provençal rosés. And really, who can forget the effervescent pinnacle that is French champagne? Indeed, it just goes on. It has to be said that their wine styles did take over the world, and while the rest of us have imitated and replicated and made expressions every bit as interesting, the original, the benchmark, the genesis of great grape growing, winemaking and production really did begin in France. It's where 'terroir' rules, and all about where you've grown your grapes and the quality of the fruit to be found in that region. The wines are labelled to reflect this ethos, with region generally taking pride of place over all other factors. So if you want to start knowing more about what you drink, France is your beginning point. If you're already a French fan, well, we're preaching to the converted. Santé!

Champagne

Nothing has quite the cachet of a bottle from Champagne. In a world where big companies and corporate ownership are often frowned upon, champagne continues to write its own set of rules. Champagne's unique character comes not only from its hallowed terroir, but also from the centuries of painstakingly accumulated experience, particularly when it comes to blending. For their sheer consistency, the non-vintage expressions from the big players are in a league of their own, and their frequently eye-watering financial resources allow them to stockpile vintage upon vintage in order to create a seamless transition of excellence from one year to the next. There are bargains to be had via some of the more discreet houses, or from the intriguing and singular Grower champagnes. Whatever your tastes and whatever your budget, we have a huge selection to choose from.

champagne | the growers

Many vigneron in Champagne sell their fruit to the large established houses, but a good number of small, family-run units craft their own champagnes from their vineyards. The wines are often bottled on the premises and come in a diverse range of distinctive styles reflecting the idiosyncrasies of their particular terroir. Grower champagnes are not a new concept, but the diversity, complexity and individuality of these boutique styles sets them apart from the mainstream. With corporatization of the industry so prevalent, many aficionados are developing a taste for these smaller scale, hand-crafted champagne styles.

Technicalities aside, these are unique wines, with this the new rosé in the range, the Hommage base wine blended before bottling with Aÿ Grand Cru Pinot Noir from 70-year-old vines.

LOUIS SIPP

46966 PINOT GRIS 2016

 $27.00

CASE OF 12 $26.00 A BOTTLE

The domaine is managed by founder Louis Sipp's great-grandson Etienne, who has converted the operation to organic production. The company combines traditional methods with modern equipment, the grapes all hand-harvested and the wines produced from local wild yeasts. The resulting expressions display great finesse and an affinity for their Ribeauvillé terroir. One of Alsace's top producers, Louis Sipp are renowned for delivering some of the region's best value. The rich and generous tendencies of their wines are accompanied by a balancing hand of finesse and a voluptuous velvety texture at their core.

The spiritual home of the aromatic expression, this battle-scarred region of overwhelming beauty is home to some of France's most profound wines. While nowadays in French hands, the region's German bloodlines still flex their muscle. Within its long and narrow confines, a host of geological combinations produce a stunning array of flavours, fragrances and textures, setting the benchmark for Pinot Gris, Riesling, Pinot Blanc, Muscat and Gewürztraminer.

GRAND CRU FRANKSTEIN

 $39.99

CASE OF 12 $38.99 A BOTTLE

Alsace is a wonderfully easy region to understand, displaying as it does the grape variety on the label, with AOC and Grand Cru – that's it. This, from one of the Grand Cru vineyards in Alsace, is a big step up from the AOC Gisselbrecht. With deep and complex aromatics, it develops crystallised fruity notes of apricot, peach, some smoky notes typical of granite soils. Round and generous, lingering and intense.

GISSELBRECHT

Burgundy

The wines produced from this stretch of vinous real estate are among the world's greatest. The only simple thing about Burgundy is that if it's red it's Pinot Noir or Gamay, and if it's white it's Chardonnay (more or less), and from there on it gets trickier. Inheritance laws have seen vineyards divided into ever smaller family parcels, and within a sea of small producers, it is not uncommon for a single vineyard to have numerous owners. Although they technically fall within Burgundian boundaries, areas such as Chablis and Beaujolais retain their own distinct identities, varietals and characteristics.

The Loire

With its 80-plus appellations, the Loire is a treasure trove of vinous expressions, from the Sauvignon Blanc-derived, smoky, mineral-tinged Sancerre and aromatic, steely-flavoured Pouilly-Fumé to the equally eminent wines of Vouvray, fashioned from Chenin Blanc and ranging from austere to opulent. The Loire offers a quality/bargain metric that, quite frankly, nowhere else in France can match. The best expressions taste like a million bucks, and cost a fraction of that.

Bordeaux

Reinforced by its imposing châteaux, the aristocratic Bordeaux holds court at the centre of France's vinous universe. The largest AOC area in France, with 86,000ha of vineyard plantings and 60 million cases produced annually, when combined with the peerless pedigree of the world famous reds, the whites of Graves and the seductive Sauternes make this a region you cannot ignore. Some of the best value Bordeaux wines are crafted by the petits (small) châteaux. They offer serious, estate-grown and château-bottled wines crafted by quality conscious individuals. These producers work hard at upping the stakes, and many are delivering earlier drinking, riper styles that allow a user-friendly route into the complex world of Bordeaux wine appreciation.

CHÂTEAU HAUT COULOUMEY

41135 MÉDOC 2016
$22.99

CASE OF 6 $19.99 A BOTTLE

Chateau Haut Couloumey carries a rich history. King Louis XIV used to hunt in their forests. It was replanted in 1998 and now has close to four hectares of vineyard in one of the oldest terroirs in Bordeaux. Harvesting is done manually and herbicides are shunned. Merlot-dominant, earthy on the nose, with plum, currant, a touch of cinnamon and oak on the palate. A freshly elegant Médoc that's good drinking right now.

CHÂTEAU BOURGNEUF

Boasting a core of ripe red fruits and well-formed tannins, this lovely Pomerol is deliciously velvety with a fresh and lively finish.

CHÂTEAU LES VALLÉES

42524 BORDEAUX 2016

$17.99 CASE OF 6 $15.99 A BOTTLE

Once owned by one of Napoleon's generals, Château Les Vallées was built in the 19th century on the ruins of a castle destroyed during the French Revolution. $17.99 CASE OF 6 $15.99 A BOTTLE

The estate's second wine, Les Tourelles is sourced off the same vineyards and devoted all the care and attention of a first wine.

The Rhône

The Rhône twists and turns down the map in a sinewy slalom of picturesque villages and steeply terraced vineyards, in the north offering up some of Syrah's finest expressions. The south plays host to Grenache and the Rhône's peerless blended wines, Vacqueyras, Vinsobres and Châteauneuf-du-Pape. In between are the rushing red rivers of generic, great-value Côtes du Rhône wines. While 95% of Rhône production is red, there is delight to be found in the floral fragrances of a Muscat Beaufort-Beaune or the lush apricot and crème fraîche nuances of a Condrieu.

CHÂTEAU MONT-REDON

Superbly Chardonnay!

Chardonnay is booming, and these ten Kiwis are stellar exemplars

Thankfully the Anything But Chardonnay crew have found something else to whinge about, and this exquisite variety capable of producing some of the greatest wines in the world is back in favour. And so it should be, if the current quality of Chardonnay in New Zealand is anything to go by – quite frankly, it has never been this good. Chardonnay is a neutral variety where the style generally comes from the way it's made. It is often referred to as 'the winemaker's grape variety'. There is an abundance of methods used to create a great Chardonnay, and many decisions the winemakers make that influence the style. Chardonnay's recent re-emergence has been a little hampered by the changing style, seemingly driven from within the cellar and led by winemakers, but unfortunately not that well communicated to general consumers. We have for a few years now categorised our Chardonnays into four easy styles: Oak Lite – think Chablisean in style, taut mineral-driven wines that evolve beautifully in the cellar; Fat Cat – the opposite, a big style with plenty of toasty oak, buttery and creamy notes; Deep & Meaningful – rich and textural without being overtly bold and buttery, mineral and complex without the lean austerity; Peaches & Cream – these are gently rounded, stonefruit-infused early drinkers, a very pleasant style.

THE SCOTTS IN THE SOUTH

Owned by the Allan Scott family, the Scott Base vineyard is stunningly sited overlooking Cromwell and Lake Dunstan. A longstanding love of Central Otago lured the Marlborough-ensconced winemakers to the region. Already an accredited sustainable vineyard, the Scotts aim to have full organic status in around two years time. The family donate a percentage of sales of the Scott Base wines to the Antarctic Heritage Trust.

LOWER ALCOHOL FOR A MINDFUL JULY

New Zealand Lighter Wines is a partnership initiative between New Zealand Wine Growers and the Ministry for Primary Industries. Launched in 2014, the 17 million dollar programme invests in the research and production of naturally lower alcohol wines containing less than 10% alcohol, a style that is well-suited to our cool climate and the conditions in New Zealand. One of the 18 wineries involved in this project is Forrest Estate, via their Doctors' range.

Edenvale

Wine without alcohol. Not an oxymoron

Edenvale are the leading producers of alcohol-free wine in Australia. The wines are made in the standard way via fermentation, where alcohol is produced. Edenvale then use the spinning cone technique. There are two key steps in the process: the first is to introduce the wine to the cone and, using nitrogen as the carrier, separate the aroma and flavour compounds. These are then held to one side. The wine is reintroduced to the cone at a higher temperature to remove the alcohol. Once de-alcoholized, the wine is blended with unfermented grape juice and the compounds that were separated, to leave less than 0.3% alc/vol. There are various ways of removing alcohol, this being the superior option, as the final product retains the aromas and flavours of the initial wine, minus the alcohol.

Lyre's

Non-alcoholic Spirits

Fancy a break? Or perhaps you want to feel the weighty substance of a good spirit but still have all your faculties intact the next morning. This, then, is for you. Lyre's non-alcoholic spirits are created not by distillation, but the meticulous blending of natural essences and extracts. This painstaking process delivers a far superior result to that of first distilling an alcoholic spirit, then stripping out the alcohol and with it, much of the flavour. These tipples are also free from all of the sugar often hidden in non-alcoholic mocktails. Lyre's aim is to make their spirits as close as possible to the originals, re-creating their true flavour so they can be easily substituted in a favourite mixed drink. "People might want to change their own drinking styles or preferences in regards to alcohol, but they won't need to in relation to flavour," says Lyre's flavour architect, sommelier David Murphy. And of course, that sense of substance is key. "When you're tasting a wine, you're looking at glycerol characters, which influence weight and how it finishes to lengthen the palate," he says. "Depending on which product, we've used a small amount of chilli or pepper-based extracts, that add length and carry to the palate and give a bit of a false alcoholic burn. The Lyre's portfolio has been awarded 10 medals at the 2020 San Francisco World Spirits Competition, so it's official: they're good. They look sensational as well.

SHOP LOCAL, SUPPORT LOCAL

the world beating Thomson

The artisanal Kiwi distillery standing tall on the global stage

With the nation recovering from economic doom and gloom, Kiwis have been patriotically lending their support to local industry and produce. From a drinks perspective this is fine, and very easy these days if you are a wine drinker or gin enthusiast of course; but what if you are usually a patron of, shall we say, rather more Celtic distillations? Whisky production, with its requirement for specific barleys and time in barrel, is a daunting and complex task. Luckily for us all, some intrepid New Zealanders have nevertheless dutifully taken up the mantle of producing some fantastic whisky.

At the forefront with this new wave of artisan distillers is Thomson Whisky. Founded in 2014, the Auckland based and proudly 100% New Zealand owned and operated company have gone from strength to strength. Originally Mat Thomson and his team operated as independent bottlers for spirit produced in Dunedin's Willowbank Distillery; these days they blend and bottle whisky produced from their own hand-beaten copper still.

For a glimpse into what Thomson is all about look no further than the Manuka Smoke Whisky. An homage to the smoky classics of Islay, but using a fresh and wholly Kiwi twist with the use of native manuka in the smoking process, this whisky reflects a fresh attitude that both honours tradition and isn't afraid to experiment. Not to be left behind by the country's insatiable thirst for craft gins Thomson also produce two of their own. Stripped back but heavily botanical, Thomson reference their heavy inspiration by music – these gins are all early rock n' roll, working with some robust basics and the volume cranked up! | DL

the Benriach

Few are the nations that can claim to have a history of innovation or invention as strong as Scotland. Scots gave us an improved steam engine through James Watts, a modern idea of economics courtesy of Adam Smith and of course Alexander Bell's telephone, to name but a selection of contributions. Golf, too, can be either credited or blamed on the Scottish, depending on your view of it. The Scots also, while perhaps not being responsible for the invention of whisky, have certainly given the world a majority of the most famous and delicious bottlings of it.

Blending these traditions of distillation and innovativeness so well, and so purely Scottish that it's a wonder 'Flower of Scotland' doesn't ring out from the ether when pouring a dram, are BenRiach of Speyside. Established in 1898 and operating for a scant two years before, like many others, being caught up in and ruined by the Pattison Crash, BenRiach would then stay closed for the next sixty-five years. Purchased and revived on several occasions from 1965 right through to 2016, the groundwork was nevertheless laid early on in this tumultuous period for some of the qualities that characterise The BenRiach to this day.

In the early 1980s, with demand for bottles of Islay outstripping supply, the decision was made to produce a peated whisky – an unusual move for a Speyside distillery. This tradition continues on, with the company producing both peated and unpeated versions. The BenRiach are also famous for their range of different wood casks and finished whiskies. These are typically left to mature in the legendary Warehouse 13, a barrel hall for the more adventurous and creative of Scotland's angels to watch over them. Darkness and mothballs of the past now firmly behind them, the future is surely bright for The BenRiach. | DL

French Spirits

Versatile Dinner Companions

The French have pioneered practically every conceivable style of wine, and in doing so have set the benchmark for quality and influenced winemakers throughout the world. And as with the likes of Italy and Spain, they have an innate and enlightened understanding that wine is a companion to food. Although the French are inextricably linked with wine, they have at the same time created a diverse range of alternative alcoholic beverages offering a wide variety of aromatic flavours and rich textures. From the controversial Absinthe to the regal cognacs, their spirits and liqueurs have stamped their dominance on the world. The likes of calvados, vermouth and pastis can be enjoyed as aperitifs to stimulate the palate either prior to or after a meal.

Clausthaler

In the 1960s to 1970s, breweries worldwide were attempting what was thought to be impossible – to brew a non-alcoholic beer; a holy grail, if you will. While most breweries gave up, Clausthaler, while adhering to the strict Reinheitsgebot, succeeded by embracing a passion that bordered on obsession.

The pioneers at Clausthaler realized that instead of trying to take the alcohol out of a standard beer, they needed to try a radical new strategy altogether, which was stopping the fermentation of the brew just before alcohol began to develop. This process came to be known as Clausthaler's Controlled Fermentation, and at the time was patented to Clausthaler exclusively. However, these days, breweries worldwide have access to the technique. | KA

Kronenbourg

It was in 1664 that Geronimus Hatt founded what is now known as the Kronenbourg Brewery; the name originated from the area the brewery was forced to relocate to in 1850, due to the excessive flooding they saw in the then-known Free Imperial City of Straßburg, Holy Roman Empire. Kronenbourg is the fifth-oldest beer brand in the world, and still stands to this day; a monument to the test of time and master brewing for over 300 years.

The premium beer '1664' is named after the year the Hatt family first started commercial brewing. It is brewed with what is known by master brewers as the 'caviar of hops' Stisselspalt, a peculiar and rare hop renowned for its low IBU and fragrant citrus qualities reminiscent of grapefruit. Stisselspalt has a preference for a specific soil and culture technique requirements, so it is unique to the Alsace region, and to Kronenbourg recipes.

Each bottle is an experience of golden hues, delicate bitter citrus and a clean, refreshing finish. Liberate your hard earned thirst, and celebrate Glengarry's French month with an ice-cold Kronenbourg 1664. Viva la France! Viva la Kronenbourg! | KA
