The Glengarry Story

The Second Generation

Our family's proud local history began five generations ago, when 20-year-old Josef Jakicevich stepped off the boat from Croatia and, after a few adventures, set himself up on 10 acres in Glengarry Road in Oratia, West Auckland. There, he planted a vineyard, ultimately extending his reach into Auckland City via his wine shop on Jervois Road. His oldest son Tony, along with his wife Monica, raised their children on the Glengarry Road property, those children being us, the third generation.

Our dad was the archetypal Croatian: he worked relentlessly, and drilled that ethic into all of us. He was right at home on the land and was a strong community player, especially when it came to sports clubs. He loved growing things, and along with the grapes at the root of our retailing business, he had a thriving occupation in strawberries for most of his life. In the late 1970s he planted a small block of Chardonnay vines, a rarity in New Zealand at that time. After harvesting his first small crop, and with no experience or advice available, dad made one tank, a stainless steel barrel of around 200 litres. After the wine had settled he thought he had stuffed up, as Chardonnay has a natural oiliness which he did not know about. Thinking he had not cleaned the tank adequately (the barrel one he used in his distillery to store fortified spirits) he blended this unique pioneering venture into a vat of sherry! A couple of months later he found out it was a natural thing. We can still hear him cursing.

The Old Man, as we called him, was all about people, and socialising while sharing copious amounts of food and drink. It was a time when Kiwis guzzled beer, and wine was only just starting to come to the fore; he had a real passion for encouraging people to have a glass of wine with their meal. Dad was very close to his staff; he knew everybody's name, from the gardens and fields to all of the stores. He regularly toured the Glengarry shops with our mum, who would often run the likes of our old city store, making it very much a family affair. In later years, dad became the Patriarch, watching over things and giving advice to us as we undertook our own turn in the Glengarry engine room. With his tenure the binding element between Dida Josef's original vision and our own one today, our father's contribution to the journey Glengarry has taken to arrive at this point was inestimable.

ORGANIC

Organic grape cultivation eschews the use of synthetic fungicides, herbicides, fertilizers and other artificial processes. Wines are regulated through legislation that can vary from country to country. One of these certification challenges is derived from the USA, where wine and food are conflated under organic regulations. There, to protect various food products, the term 'organic wine' can't be applied because of sulphur present, resulting in the designation 'made from organic grapes'. We encounter that in New Zealand when the producer labels both their domestic and exported product with the one label. That aside, organic wines are strong here, with an impressive 10% of our total production organic. Certification is important; while transitioning to fully-certified status, producers may refer to being in transition. The two certifications recognised in New Zealand are BioGro and AsureQuality.

LOVEBLOCK SAUVIGNON BLANC 2019 $19.99

One of the pioneers of cult Kiwi Sauvignon Blanc, Kim Crawford and wife Erica have now turned their interests towards producing the same high quality and deliciously drinkable styles with organic fruit from their Loveblock Vineyard. Aromatics of peach, passionfruit and citrus accompany an elegant palate of white peach and tropical fruit characters balanced by precise acidity. BioGro Organic Certified.

10860 LOVEBLOCK PINOT NOIR 2019 $29.99

BIODYNAMIC

Biodynamic producers follow the same practices as organic, with some additions. Biodynamic viticulture and winemaking draws its philosophy from the premise of Austrian philosopher, Rudolph Steiner, that the Earth – and thus the vineyard itself – is a living organism. In order to keep everything in balance, the rationale is that vinicultural practices need to be timed to coincide with the rhythms of the earth, embracing the whole ecosystem in a way that requires environment, plants, animals and people to be aligned in complete harmony. As with organics, there is a certification system, but it's a global standard known as Demeter, named for the Greek goddess of grain and fertility.

EMILIANA NOVAS 90762 GRAN RESERVA CHARDONNAY 2018 $17.99

CASE OF 12 $16.99 A BOTTLE

Emiliana are the gold standard for biodynamic and organic winemaking in Chile. Indeed, with their all-encompassing ecological and social strategies around terroir and their workers, they are an example to the world of how things can be done. The fruit for the Novas was harvested at night to take advantage of lower temperatures. Pineapple and apricot aromas, with notes of toasted hazelnut. Creamy and textural, with balanced acidity and good depth.

90759 EMILIANA ADOBE CHARDONNAY 2019 $13.99

NATURAL

Natural wines are relatively difficult to define, and aren't certificated in the way that, say, biodynamic wines are. They are farmed organically or biodynamically, hand-harvested and 'transformed' without the addition or removal of anything in the cellar. No additives or processing aids are used, and intervention in the naturally occurring fermentation process is kept to a minimum. Neither fining nor filtration are employed. The result is a wine full of naturally occurring microbiology; it's about using what one was given, with the wine evolving naturally to be whatever it will be. The natural wine movement is often scoffed at by traditional wine lovers. There is, though, much to be said for doing things naturally. In the end, it comes down to whether what's in your hand is a great glass of wine.

PINOT NOIR 2019
$39.99

CASE OF 12 $38.99 A BOTTLE

Owned by Gareth Renowdon, with Theo Coles making the wine, the first vintage of The Hermit Ram was in Canterbury in 2012. While generally having made wine for those following more traditional practices, Theo has always aimed to add and take as little as possible, wanting the terroir to shine through. This not only shows how great natural wines can be, but also highlights the quality coming out of Canterbury.

12168 THE HERMIT RAM SKIN FERMENTED SAUVIGNON BLANC 2019 $29.99

VEGAN-FRIENDLY

The reason not all wines are vegan- or vegetarian-friendly is down to the way a wine is clarified – i.e. made clear and bright – via a process called fining. Young wines naturally contain proteins, tartrates, tannins and phenolics. These are in no way harmful, and most wines will eventually self-clarify. In fact, there's nothing wrong with an un-fined wine; it's probably more to do with the fact that we are not used to it, preferring our wine shiny and fresh. To hasten the process, many wine-makers use fining agents. The most commonly used are casein (milk protein), albumen (egg white), gelatin (animal protein) and isinglass (fish bladder protein). When it comes to assessing what's in there, it's worth noting the label is generally not going to be of much assistance, though fortunately some wineries are getting the message and we are starting to see Vegan references on labels. To assist, type 'vegan' into the search bar on the Glengarry website and you'll find them all.

BROOKFIELDS

13447 ROBERTSON
PINOT GRIS 2020
$16.99

Peter Robertson has been plying his trade as the Brookfields owner/winemaker for almost four decades, and now well over his 10,000 hours, he is very good at what he does. The wines of Alsace have long been a source of inspiration. Lighter, more floral than its Alsatian counterparts, his Pinot Gris offers a vivacious, aromatic palate and lively acidity, with delicate notes of pear, peach, honeysuckle and spice. Its dry style is offset by the sweet fruit and fresh, vibrant flavours.

SUSTAINABLE

98% of the vineyard area in New Zealand is now certified as sustainably managed. Using a programme launched in 1997, our country has led the world in transitioning to the position it occupies today. With our wine industry recognising that a collective approach was the way to go, grape growers around NZ worked in tandem to adhere to standards, establishing an industry certification programme in 2002, Sustainable Winegrowing NZ. Independently audited, its goal is to encourage the production of high quality wine via a combination of environmentally responsible and economically viable methods. Key focus areas are Water, Waste, Pest and Disease, Soil, Climate Change and People.

Allan Scott Family Winemakers are an exemplar of sustainable methods. In 2011, they commissioned a state-of-the-art water recycling facility. It recycles 100% of the wastewater generated by the winery and bottling hall for re-use on the vineyards. The winery aims to minimise waste to landfill by implementing recycling and reuse practices around glass waste, cardboard and paper, organic solid residuals (including marc), winery wastewater, scrap metal, the separation of kitchen waste for composting and a return arrangement with suppliers for various packaging waste. The Scotts have also introduced sheep into their vineyards. Allowed to roam free within specific blocks, the sheep play a role in keeping winter grasses and weeds under control.

DRY FARMING

The term dry farming does not quite conjure up the whole picture, the phrase referring to the fact that vines, while accessing water naturally, are not irrigated. With water an increasingly scarce resource in so many parts of the world, growing grapes without its addition can be both responsible and practical environmentally. Furthermore, the fruit can often benefit from this type of viticulture, with many suggesting that it yields more concentrated fruit with a stronger sense of place. All of which makes sense; when a vine is irrigated, it has no incentive to push its roots deeper into the soil in search of water. When the vines are stressed through lack of irrigation or via competition from nearby plantings, the roots will reach downwards for survival. With the Matawhero winery adherents to a dry farming regime in sun-drenched Gisborne, one bottle of their wine saves the Earth 55 litres of water.

MATAWHERO

MERLOT 2019
$20.99

CASE OF 6 $19.99 A BOTTLE

A Gisborne institution, Matawhero was originally home to Bill and Denis Irwin, an innovative father and son who in their time transformed our approach to winemaking. The winery is now the passion of Richard and Kirsten Searle. In the sun-soaked Gisborne vineyards, Merlot grows with ease. An easy-drinking style with well-integrated oak and supple tannins, fruit is what drives this wine, with lush aromas of blackberry, mulberry, plum jam and the quintessentially Merlot iron lift.

The strongly family-oriented and independent Allan Scott winery is one of Marlborough's originals, with Allan himself one of the very first to put a spade into stony Marlborough soils and plant grapevines. Their Black Label is an opulent wine displaying lean mineral notes characteristic of the Wairau Valley. Lavish aromatics of stonefruit, pear and almond are rounded off with an ambrosial mouthfeel courtesy of time spent in oak.

B-CORP+BGCI

Bruichladdich Distillery officially became B Corp-certified in May 2020, one of 3,327 companies globally that have been verified by B Lab as 'using business as a force for good'. This involves adhering to high standards of social and environmental performance where profit is balanced with purpose. Bruichladdich is the only whisky and gin distillery in Europe to meet B Lab's stringent standards. They circulate the wastewater from their stills to heat their offices, bottling hall and visitor centre, and have switched to 100% green electricity. As Islay's largest private employer, they refuse to outsource warehousing and bottling. They partner with their local farming community, with 50% of requirements grown locally across 21 different farms. The company also supports Botanic Gardens Conservation International (BGCI), which harnesses a global network to save the world's threatened plants.

NATURAL AIR | WATER RECYCLING

The Rhône Valley's Mont-Redon have adopted the concept of a Canadian Well, which circulates outside air through pipes buried at a depth where the ground temperature is almost stable. This enables heating or cooling as required by the seasons and keeps the temperature at a constant level. Using the subterranean passage that their grandfather created to drain water from the plateau, there are fifteen metres of tunnel filled with water running beneath Mont-Redon. This allows them to connect to the open air, creating an in-draught that functions as natural air conditioning. At seven metres deep, the cellars maintain a constant temperature of 11°C throughout summer and winter. Mont-Redon have built their own purifying station where all waste from the vineyards, cellar and château itself are treated biologically before being drained on a bed of reeds.

CASE OF 12 $23.99 A BOTTLE

Established back in 1344, Château Mont-Redon is one of the oldest wine-producing estates in France, as well as the largest single property in Châteauneuf-du-Pape. They operate on a manual they themselves call 'ancient know-how.' The Lirac appellation in the southern Rhône is justly famous for its rosés; they are, indeed, some of France's finest. This is a lively and refreshing Grenache-Cinsault blend dominated by raspberry notes, evoking soft summer fruit characters balanced by a crisp mineral edge.

Akarua

BANNOCKBURN

The Pinot Noir virtuosos celebrate 20 vintages

Embedded in a pristine and breathtaking landscape, the majority of Akarua's Central Otago vineyards are planted in their signature Pinot Noir. Wines are hard-won from soils that are mostly broken schist and sand, with frosts in winter and dry nor'westers that devigorate the vines. They put a lot of focus on fruit quality, and in the winery employ gentle, minimalist techniques that allow the wines to express the purity of fruit and terroir. Akarua's Pinot Noir offerings are up there with the best, garnering a hefty array of trophies and gold medals within the past six vintages via a skill set they have honed to perfection over the last twenty vintages.

AKARUA

14483 THE SIREN
PINOT NOIR 2017
$89.99

Akarua's Siren Pinot Noir is only made in exceptional years, from fruit off Akarua's home vineyard in Bannockburn. A barrel selection, this is the latest release from the fine and silky 2017 vintage. It's very fragrant on the nose, with violet florals, liquorice and mocha notes all in play. The palate is textural and resonant, offering a complex array of dark fruits, hints of oak spice and fine tannins. Finishes long and velvety.

Plume

Lake Chalice's new flagship range

Lake Chalice have launched a new range as the crown of a multi-tiered portfolio that marries consistent quality to supreme value – always a winning combination, we've found. The Plume range looks to bring its own perspective to fine wines, focusing on an attention to detail where an artful blend of simplicity and complexity is wreathed with beauty. Chloe Gabrielsen is the winemaker at the Plume helm:

"2017 was our first interaction with Plume by Lake Chalice, and it was about getting to know the fruit. We are looking to always be expressive, and every year the expression has shown itself in a different way, based on how we feel about the fruit potential. The fruit quality from 2017 was just incredible, and when you have the best fruit, you can almost do anything and nothing at the same time. We really took a step back from interference or moulding and just gave Plume the time and space to show us what it was made of."

Everything is done with a light touch and minimal intervention, using the very best barrels and allowing the processes to evolve naturally.

Sourced from Chalice's Eyrie Vineyard, the fruit quality was spectacular, meaning little intervention was required. No fining and no filtration. Gently aromatic, with notes of dark fruit, herbs and spice. In the mouth, a vibrant core of red berries and cherry, with hints of pepper and an underlying earthiness. Silky and textural, with fresh, lithe tannins and lovely balance.

Moutard

Arrival of the 2014 Grand cru Chablis

Just off the boat from France are the Moutard-Diligent Chablis Grand cru wines. While Moutard are indeed the creators of wonderful champagnes, their family's roots are in Chablis, where they own some of the finest Grand cru vineyards in the region. There is only one variety that counts in Chablis, and that is Chardonnay, which thrives in the same chalk soils that originate in Dover and run through Champagne. Chablis is Chardonnay in one of its purest, most exquisite expressions, and we're delighted to have snapped up a set of Moutard's exceptional 2014 Grand cru wines, which are, frankly, a bargain for wines at this level.

Mumm

Mumm's new-look Marlborough méthode

Once upon a time, the mighty Mumm came to Marlborough to create a premium NZ méthode traditionnelle wine, harnessing their supercharged expertise with bubbles to our unique terroir. Of course it's great: a surge of lemon and lime, hints of grapefruit, toasty fresh bread, vibrant stonefruit flavours on a multi-tiered, creamy palate, a soupçon of honey and freshly-baked croissant. And now they've regarbed their two creations in new attire with a new name, Mumm Marlborough, just to put us well and truly on the méthode map. Not that we weren't already there, of course.

Proud Legacy

The curtain closes on Vidal's Legacy and Soler wines

115 years. That's how long Vidal has been in operation, making it one of our true pioneering icons. Barcelona-born Anthony Vidal arrived in New Zealand in 1888 with just an apple and a penny in his pocket, where he joined his uncle, Joseph Soler, and learnt the art of winemaking. In 1905, Anthony found Hawkes Bay and established his iconic winery.

For the last 15-20 years, the creation of the Vidal wines has been under the stewardship of the impressive Hugh Crichton. The winery was a founding member of the Living Wine group, is a member of Sustainable Winegrowing New Zealand and BioGro certified. Their Legacy and Soler wines have garnered impressive scores from Robert Parker's Wine Advocate. Sadly, recent events have rendered the production of these wines unsustainable, and further vintages will not be made. This is, then, your one and only chance to grab some of these New Zealand legends at what are astonishingly low prices, given their status.

WINEMAKER HUGH CRICHTON

VIDAL LEGACY 93/100 WINE ADVOCATE
19472 CHARDONNAY 2018
$32.99 NORMALLY $59.99

The flagship Legacy wines are produced in limited quantities and only from outstanding vintages. Selected low-yielding vines produce fruit with superb concentration. An absolute steal at this price, the Legacy Chardonnay delivers sublime complexity and balance, with citrus notes, roasted nuts and fragrant flinty aromatics combining on a plump, intricate, textural palate. An elegant, lingering wine that will respond beautifully to careful cellaring.

VIDAL SOLER 91/100 WINE ADVOCATE
19415 CHARDONNAY 2018
$23.99 NORMALLY $36.99

The Kokako vineyard is situated on an old river bed of Omahu Gravel soil topped with silt. Notes of citrus, stonefruit, spice, vanilla and toasted hazelnut permeate the vibrant and elaborate palate. This will continue to age gracefully over time. Stunning price.

MARTINBOROUGH

World Famous

Martinborough's superb single vineyard Pinot Noir wines

Despite being home to only a small percentage of what's made in New Zealand, Martinborough's reputation for top-quality Pinot Noir has caught the attention of the Australians, with the Barossa Valley's esteemed Torbreck purchasing Escarpment. The sale saw Larry McKenna, often referred to as the godfather of Kiwi Pinot Noir, retained as the winemaker. Larry's 2013 Kupe Pinot Noir was the only Australasian Wine in Wine Spectator's Top 10 wines of 2015. The 2016 vintage of the same wine was the highest-scoring wine from Robert Parker's The Wine Advocate.

The old vine age in Martinborough is one of the keys to these exceptional wines and their impressive complexity. October signals the release of this year's Single Vineyard collection from Escarpment, all from the excellent 2018 vintage. The flagship Kupe Pinot Noir was awarded 95/100 by Bob Campbell, Kiwa 93/100 and Te Rehua 92/100. It's always a treat to try Escarpment's new releases, with the Kiwa's enchanting perfume and florals particularly captivating. Alongside them, we feature a selection of top Single Vineyard wines from the rest of Martinborough, all from the excellent 2018 vintage. The region's tiny production can be overlooked due to the noise from down south, but it shouldn't be. Take a moment – you'll be pleased you did.

ESCARPMENT 10286 TE REHUA PINOT NOIR 2018 $79.99

From the Barton Vineyard's 25-year-old vines, grown on the deep alluvial gravels the Martinborough Terraces are renowned for. Hand harvested, fermented using indigenous yeasts in traditional wooden cives, matured in French barriques for 18 months and bottled without filtration. Soft and textural in the mouth, evocative of its terroir, with rich black cherry and plum characters on the palate. This will continue to develop for up to 10 years.

CHAMPAGNE

The Roaring Twenties, that famous period of The Prohibition, bootlegging and speakeasies, found Piper-Heidsieck at the epicentre. The champagne house has uncovered records from the 1867 to 1906 period revealing that they were, at the time, shipping several hundreds of thousands of bottles of champagne to the United States. Archival images show bootleggers unloading Piper-Heidsieck cases in the Port of Saint-Pierre and Miquelon, located near the southern shores of Canadian island, Newfoundland.

These cases had made the journey from Reims, and it was at this French port that wooden transport cases were broken and bottles transferred to jute bags filled with salt for their journey into the US. This made the disposal of bottles in the sea much easier when they were intercepted by police. Once the salt had dissolved, and the coast was clear, the bottles and jute bags floated back to the surface for bootleggers to collect and continue on their way. Boats were equipped with aircraft engines so that they could outpace the Coast Guard, and the missions were carried out with military precision. Speed boats could take between 300 and 400 cases, and men required five minutes to unload the boat. Upon arrival in the United States, bottles were once again placed in wooden cases and sent on their way to private clubs and underground speakeasies.

To commemorate the 100-year anniversary of all this audacious behaviour, Piper-Heidsieck has launched an international limited-edition bottle and gift box containing their signature Cuvée Brut, complete with the 1920s label and bearing the moniker Piper Brut, as it was known at the time.

Gearing up for the America's Cup

Two America's Cup sponsors ready themselves for some salty excitement

Mumm has for the second time partnered with the America's Cup to be the official champagne. Their involvement adds, besides the all-important funding, a dash of French panache and all those spraying bubbles. Mumm owners Pernod Ricard also boast New Zealand's own Brancott Estate as part of their impressive stable, so during the America's Cup you'll also encounter the authentically Kiwi wines of Brancott Estate, sporting their new sheep-centric labels. While the events of 2020 have bestowed upon us a very different event to the one intended, what won't be changing is the exhilarating yacht racing. Without the supporting tourists present, we're going to have to step up and make a lot of noise on behalf of the rest of the world. Go Kiwis.

FIFE

Darnley's

Small batch artisanal Scottish gin

In February 1565 Mary, Queen of Scots, spied Lord Darnley through a courtyard window at Wemyss Castle in Fife. Her view of him was evidently a very favourable one, as the pair would marry less than six months later. Fatefully the fruit of their union would ultimately forge a United Kingdom through their son James, King of England, Scotland and Ireland. Produced by Wemyss Distillery, the Darnley's gin pays homage in name to this historic meeting. James took disparate kingdoms and from them tried to build a Britain greater than the sum of its parts. Darnley's in turn make gin intended to meld the best of the distilling traditions of both England and Scotland.

London Dry in style, the Darnley's gins use a more modest number of botanicals than some others, with the aim being balance and for every ingredient used to be detectable and enjoyable. The Elderflower gin utilises six botanicals: juniper, lemon peel, elderflower, coriander seed, orris root and angelica root. As you'd expect from the name it is the elderflower that is both the star of the show and the most unusual botanical used. Sourced from elder trees growing wild in Fife, it adds a floral twist to the nose and is present on the palate without being overpowering. The result is a light, fresh, delicious gin.

Using a slightly more broad range of botanicals, the Darnley's Spiced Gin is a very different beast to its flowery sibling. Juniper, coriander seed and angelica root return and are joined by nutmeg, ginger, cumin, cinnamon, cassia, grains of paradise and cloves. On the nose the juniper is much more present than in the Elderflower, and on the whole is more pungent, with the cinnamon making itself known. The taste is indeed quite spicy, with a particularly long, ginger-laden finish. The Spiced gin lends itself wonderfully to a rich and full-flavoured martini, or for something a little different, try it with ginger beer and a slice of orange. | DL

U'luvka

POLAND

The world's most awarded vodka

There is nothing quite so pure about Poland as the custom, based on an ancient code of hospitality, where one is greeted into someone's home with vodka. It was this custom that started the love affair with vodka for the U'Luvka distillers and led to them to visit Poland frequently, seeking out its secrets, origins and lore. During this research, they discovered that the legendary alchemist, Sendivogius, had distilled a magical elixir for the court of King Sigismund III, and it is from this legend that U'Luvka has been lovingly recreated. With nearly 50 international gold medals, U'Luvka is the most awarded vodka in the world, standing out for its pure, authentic style. Made with the finest Polish rye, wheat and barley, it uses water from a deep, crystalline well for the mash and is distilled three times, ensuring its celebrated power, purity, smoothness and breadth of flavour | AS

U'LUVKA VODKA

92196

700ML $89.00

Pronounced 'You-Love-Ka' and recognisable by its tear drop-shaped bottle. A blend of 50% Rye, 25% Wheat and 25% Barley creates a balanced vodka that's slightly sweet with an oily mouthfeel. What the hell are Seltzers?

The drink that's storming the world

Let's put alcohol aside to start this tale and commence with the basics. The term comes from the German town, Nieder Seltzer, whose fame is derived from its mineral springs of naturally-carbonated water. These started to be commercially shipped somewhere around the 18th century. Not wanting to be left behind, the Americans created spa towns around their own mineral springs, with the term 'seltzers' becoming a popular reference. The medicinal benefits supposedly associated with these natural waters was one of their key selling points, something that has carried through to the health claims made by alcoholic seltzers.

Naturally sparkling water is one thing – technically, that is of course discovered, not invented; so, the invention of seltzers came about, in fact, in the UK, where carbonated water was fashioned. The next twist involves no alcohol either. It came in the form of the temperance movement which, during the Prohibition, encouraged the evolution of plain old sparkling water into flavoured seltzers.

So, onto hard seltzers, or alcoholic seltzers, or as we are being introduced to in New Zealand, seltzers. In America, this category has carved itself off from the sweet ready-to-drink market as being a healthier option with less sugar and less calories. Here starts the confusion, but before we get to that, a definition: 1. A seltzer is a term used for carbonated water, either via a natural source or carbonated. Flavours may be added. 2. An alcoholic seltzer, or hard seltzer, is the above with alcohol added.

From there comes the question, alcohol from where? The two methods of production divide into 1. Alcohol being added, or 2. Ethanol being derived from fermentation and that fermented liquid becoming the base of the product. From this we can derive a number of different types of seltzers: those made by adding different types of alcohol to sparkling water plus flavourings; those made from fermented hops – to provide the alcohol – and combined with sparkling water; those put together from anything else that's fermentable, grapes included.

With this definition in mind, those popular RTDs, Wild X Soda, Part Time Rangers, Pals, etc. are all seltzers. So why all the fuss? Read the media and they sound like the emperor's new clothes. In America, seltzers are a massive market and came along as an alternative to the very sweet ready-to-drink options. In America, on the back of the implied health benefits, the category of hard seltzers has taken off, being lower in calories than the current RTDs. You could say we are already up with the trend in New Zealand; in Glengarry our range of ready-to-drink options includes the likes of Part Time Rangers and Wild X Soda. Though they choose not to put the term on the can, they are in fact seltzers.

What you do need to know is that these are all the same thing: they are alcoholic sodas. They are made differently and have disparate sugar levels and resulting carbs. Don't be fooled into thinking that they must be called a seltzer to be better for you; that's not the case. What is new to NZ are the beer-based ones, two of which we introduce here: Pure Piraña and Club Setter, both with the alcoholic component derived from the fermentation of hops. They are crisp and refreshing, and a welcome addition to the range.

Epic

ONEHUNGA

As one would expect from a brewery named Epic, it just makes sense that after much experimentation and months of sampling, Epic would go back to basics and use an 'epic' amount of hops to brew an immensely dank and hazy IPA like the Joose Party. Sourcing only the biggest, juiciest, stickiest Citra, Mosaic and Simcoe hops they could find, then cranking up this hopped-out party with a blend of T90 hop pellets and Cryo hops to give the maximum level of desired aromas and flavours. It's quite like drizzling freshly-squeezed passionfruit, mango and pineapple juice across your tongue. Sitting at a comfortable 5.3% alc/vol, and with super low bitterness and maximum haze, Epic's Joose Party will keep every Hazy-Head happy with being able to sit down and drink a few from the six-pack. Share some with a friend. They will thank you for it. Epic-ly. | KA
